“Heavenly light shines day after day”

Derived from Shangshu Dazhuan (Scholia of the Collection of Archaic Texts), the name of Fudan signifies the university's perpetual pursuit of excellence since the moment of its foundation. Education, as a promising and sustainable career, requires our unremitting endeavors year after year to achieve the glorious goal. For more than one hundred years, generations of Fudan people have kept such a belief and commitment, which led to the university's brilliance and glory, and cast upon the university's brand its spiritual core and cultural basis.

“Dedication to learning, passion for accomplishment; growth with great virtues, readiness to help others”

Since its reestablishment in 1985, School of Management at Fudan University (FDSM) has grown along with the magnificent process of reform and development in China. Driven by the glorious mission—“Centered within the Chinese business environment, we are committed to advancing academic and applied research, as well as sharing innovative ideas and thoughts. We also strive to develop professional managers, elite scholars and social leaders who through their global perspectives and local insights, contribute to economic growth and social development.”, and with the unremitting efforts of all the faculty and staff, we have not only promoted the teaching and research strength in an all-round way, but also cultivated large numbers of outstanding professional management talents for the economic development of China.

The great contributions made by generations of faculty and staff have been the driving force for the School's consistent advancement, impressive breakthroughs and eventually have forged an unfolding path of exploration and development to the management education, which benefits both China and the world. In the past 30 years, significant improvement has been made in disciplinary structure, teaching and research, top-tier international accreditation has been attained within the shortest period of time in the world and remarkable achievements have also been made in the authoritative international rankings by multiple professional degree programs of the School. These achievements are not only the recognition of our long-term commitment to academic researches, talent cultivations and social services, but also a milestone on our path to making further development and becoming a world-class business school.

We deeply understand that only through the continuous endeavor and unremitting exploration can we build a world-class business school. Looking forward, we shall strive to fulfill our responsibility for China's economic growth by cultivating excellent talents, and developing leading management ideas. With the belief and mission in mind, and through several generations' persistent pursuit, we hold the firm belief that FDSM will eventually become a leading business school in the world.

Let us join hand in hand to wish all the best!
